FilmSnobbery founder Nic LaRue sits down at the 2019 Oxford Film Festival with actress/director Cheryl Allison to talk about her new short film HIDING IN DAYLIGHT. They chat about how the film relates to current global events, casting chemistry and making sure that LGBT actors were included to support the visibility of LGBT characters on screen, and how the business sides of directing and acting differ.

HIDING IN DAYLIGHT SYNOPSIS -

After a gay purge in a dystopian future, two couples who secretly meet once a week to reminisce about their former openly gay lives must decide if their clandestine meetings are worth risking their lives.
